Corrupted Luxury

b is a Greek artist living in Athens. His work is inspired by the social and political situations that have encompassed Greece's landscape and Athens over the past few decades. The artist views the city as an open studio: a big canvas without limits where his creatures are winking playfully to the viewers and challenge them to discover his "b. world."

Also trained as an architect and graphic designer, b. has developed a body of work recognizable for its use of colorful and detailed characters and "sea of objects."

When looking from far away at b.'s work featured in b.: Corrupted Luxury, you may not be able to make out the individual forms and how they interplay with each other. But as you get closer you can see Christmas trees, stuffed animal characters, military tanks, birthday cakes, hamburgers, etc. - anything and everything that people consume or throw away.

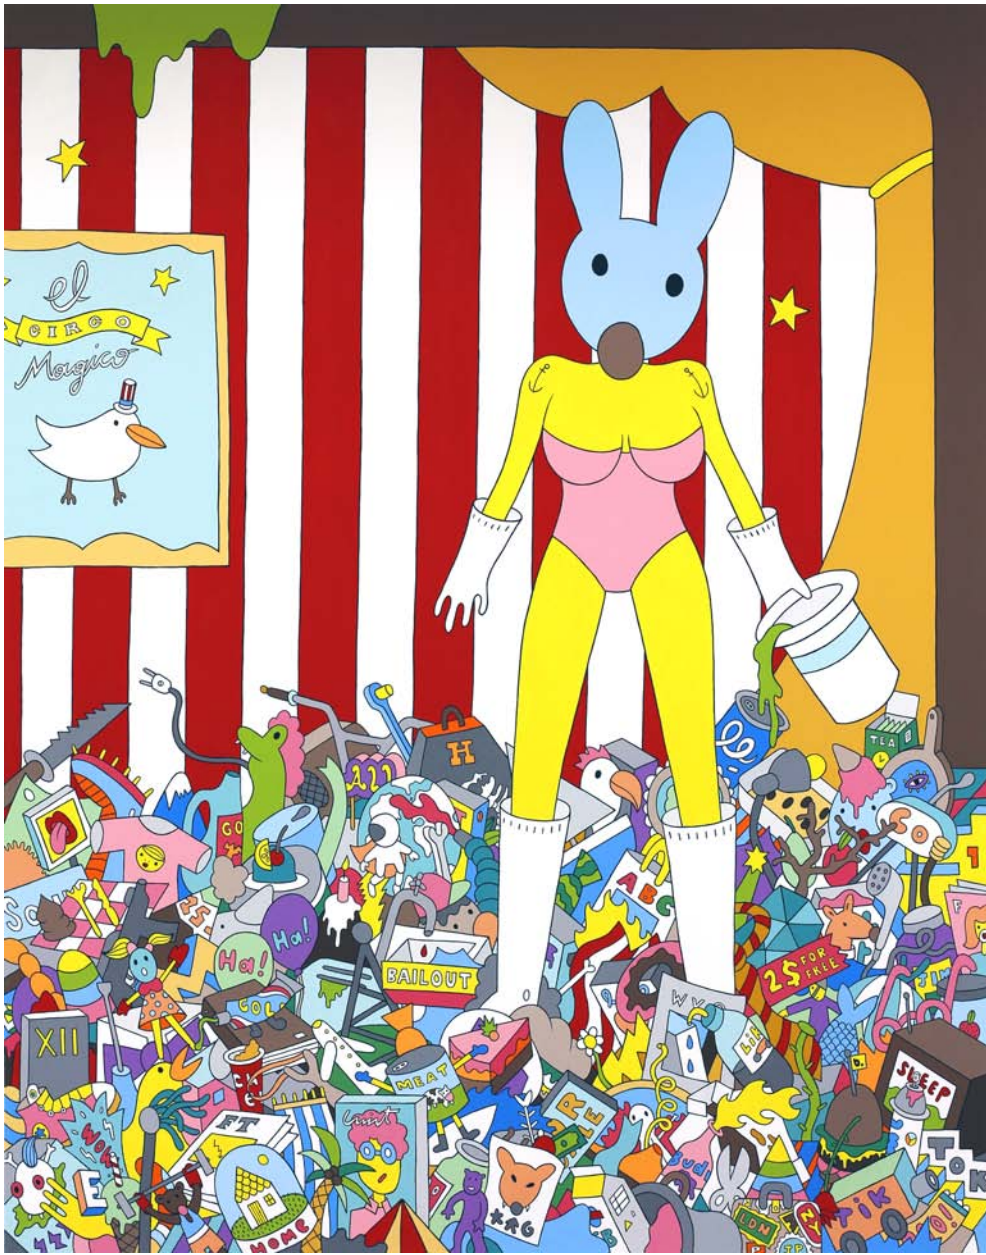

His paintings introduce this contrast, one which his home country faces at the moment: the superficial and imaginary optimistic reality of its situation vs. people's lifestyle through an imaginary and optimistic world.
